Hello

The employment insurance proposal is a great idea.

This would be an opportune time to add a revenue stream for the government and New Zealanders that. if it had been introduced early in the automation revolution, would have made the NZ government very wealthy. But it is not too late, particularly with the imminent introduction of robotic workers spearheaded by Elon Musk.

Add taxation on automation and robots to match the income taxes of the workers they replace.

It is still a win for businesses as they wouldn't pay the remaining wages hence be more profitable once the automation / robot production costs are covered.

The money generated could be used to offset inequities, support a universal basic income, voluntary work, and develop new jobs.

Thank you
Adrian Molenaar
