Hi.

Under section ZZ.

I'm currently a non practicing AFA and Certified Financial Planner. I'm 47 and intend on becoming a practicing financial planner again at approx. Age 55. If I cancel my current AFA status i will need to gain a degree to practice at age 55. Also if i keep it i will need to join a FAP but this is unlikely as I won't be giving any advice or selling any products for the next 8 years. No FAP would want me. So I'm in limbo

There needs to be something that addresses this issue as I'm not the only person in this boat.

I'm currently working in a financial adviser compliance role. Also a Financial Adviser Assessor.

PS these views are my own and doesn't reflect the views of my employer.

Thank you
